What is the Annual Campaign?

Every year, Art+Feminism invites event organizers from around the world to come together to create and edit content related to gender, feminism and the arts on Wikipedia (and elsewhere in the Wikiverse). Since 2014, over 21,000 people around the world have participated in our edit-a-thons, in 27 different languages resulting in the creation and improvement of more than 100,000 Wikipedia articles.

Why Wikipedia?

Wikipedia is consistently one of the top ten websites in the world. Search engines like Google, smart devices in your home, and large institutions like the Museum of Modern Art all rely on Wikipedia for information. However, Wikipedia has significant diversity gaps with more than 80% of Wikipedia editors identifying as white and as male. Through our annual campaign, Art+Feminism works to close these gaps.

Who are Art+Feminism Event Organizers?

The Spelman College Museum of Fine Art, The British Library, the University of Nigeria Nsukka, Parsons Paris, and Universidad Nacional de Colombia are just a few of the organizations who’ve hosted Art+Feminism events throughout the years. The Art+Feminism campaign is popular among people who make use of or work in libraries, schools, arts organizations and activist spaces; we welcome anyone interested in writing and righting our stories.

How you can participate

Attend an event
Though the majority of Art+Feminism events take place in March, events are held year round. To find an A+F event near you, visit our calendar: artandfeminism.org/events/

Organize an event
From hosting an edit-a-thon to coincide with a museum exhibition to creating collaborative editing projects with their students, Art+Feminism event organizers take creative approaches to participating in the campaign. Email us at info@artandfeminism.org to become an event organizer.

How A+F supports event organizers

Tutorials and Guides
Whether you have some experience editing Wikipedia or are completely new, we have written guides and video tutorials to help you learn how to edit and organize your own edit-a-thon.

Regional Ambassadors
Our team of Regional Ambassadors are experienced Wikimedians who are available to answer questions about planning your Art+Feminism event.

Event Funding
As an Art+Feminism organizer, you can apply for funds to support your event.
